Subject: Meeting

Stephan,

I just spoke with Caroline about setting up a brief meeting on behalf of my client Teck, a mining company headquartered in Vancouver, B.C. For context, they own the Red Dog Mine in Alaska, one of the world's largest zinc mines.

You may be aware that Teck is the primary responsible party at a megasite in Northeastern Washington, the Upper Columbia River Site, within EPA Region 10. EPA started an assessment of the Site back in 2000, and Teck took over the RI/FS in 2006.

We are finally getting to a place in the process where, with some focus, the Agency has the opportunity to complete portions of it in the relatively near term.

It's been several years since the company has meaningfully checked in with Headquarters about this Site, and we think it would be really good, given how far along things are - and your efforts to push the Superfund program from a process-management to a project-management mindset - to open up a line of communication.

Teck's Senior Vice President, Peter Rozee, will be visiting Washington, D.C. on February 24th and 25th. We'd like to see if your schedule would accommodate a short meeting one of those two days when he will be in town.

The company is working with Region 10 on the Site, so again, a meeting with you isn't to make an "ask" - it's to make introductions, share the company's perspectives and potentially get your insights from your work with the Superfund Task Force and establish a line of communication as we move forward.

All the best,
Tom
